

Cloud Peak Skyway

Sky Road Across the Bighorns

4 Days/3 Nights
Gateway City: Sheridan, Wyoming

Every spring, wildflowers cover the hillsides turning the meadows red, white, purple and blue. Deer, elk and moose frolic on the rugged alpine landscapes where views extend for more than 40 miles. Two canyons loom overhead as you pass through. In winter, the landscape turns white with a blanket of snow, waiting for another colorful spring. You'll discover all this and more on the Cloud Peak Skyway, a 45-mile Scenic Byway in north central Wyoming, that crests at the 9,666 foot Powder River Pass. Cloud Peak, the "granddaddy" of the Bighorn Mountains, can only been seen from this route. The parkway was considered quite modern when it opened in 1920, yet the "white knuckle" twists and turns along with the steep grades, spoke to the gumption of early motorists enjoying new scenic roads. The route was also the scene of history, when a range war between wealthy ranchers and small farmers broke out. It took the Sixth Cavalry and the sheriff with a posse of 200 men to route out 50 hired killers who were holed up at a local ranch. Take your time as you travel this beautiful road, savor the time at the top of the world, and enjoy the unique nature that makes this route a Scenic Byway. It's one of a kind.

Touring the Byway

We recommend starting your journey in Sheridan, where you can tour the Museum at the Bighorns, Trail End State Historic Site and the Don King Museum, before spending the night at a fully restored flour mill.

On Day Two, you'll be heading south to Buffalo. Along the way, explore the Brinton Museum with extensive art collections and Fort Phil Kearney State Historic Site. Once in Buffalo, you can stay at the historic landmark Occidental Hotel, complete with a restaurant, saloon and its own museum.

Before leaving Buffalo on Day Three, you can take the historic walking tour and visit the Jim Gatchell Memorial Museum, before heading out to drive the Cloud Peak Skyway. Even though the Byway ends at Ten Sleep (yes, that's the real name of a town), you can continue to Worland and then drive north to Greybull for an overnight stay. While there, you can tour the Greybull Museum, the Bighorn Basin Geoscience Center and the Museum of Flight and Ariel Firefighting.

From there, we wish you safe passage if you are traveling on another Wyoming Scenic Byway, or a safe and pleasant journey home.

DAY ONE

Sheridan

Expansive western history right out of the movies, dramatic mountain vistas, new world comforts, and wide-open spaces define this city named after Union Civil War General Philip Sheridan. Founded in 1882 after a series of clashes with Native Americans, the arrival of the railroad in 1892 and the discovery of coal stimulated growth. In that era, the town's social activity centered around the bars, pool halls and brothels where outlaws made history. William F. "Buffalo Bill" Cody made the Sheridan Inn his headquarters for tryouts for his Wild West show. Set against the magnificent backdrop of the Bighorn Mountains, Sheridan now offers modern hospitality with old west vibes. In fact, True West Magazine ranked Sheridan as the number one Top Western Town. The downtown's historic buildings have been rebuilt and repurposed to house galleries, boutiques, shops, restaurants and more.

Museum at the Bighorns

The Museum at the Bighorns makes a priority of promoting a greater understanding of the American West and exploring history through the ears and eyes of the men and women who settled Sheridan County. Exhibits feature the hearty ranchers, railroaders, miners, and soldiers, all of whom arrived from around the world to settle in the shadow of the Bighorn Mountains.

DAY TWO

The Brinton Museum

Connecting the past, present, and future of the American West and showcases each in collections of unique and engaging artwork, the Quarter Circle A Ranch encompasses 620 acres, also designated as an Audubon Important Bird Area with gardens and outdoor sculptures. Exhibits in the Historic Brinton Ranch House feature Bradford Brinton's collection original watercolors, oils, pen and ink drawings, sculptures, and historical documents in their original setting. The new 24,000 Forrest E. Mars, Jr. Building highlights extensive collections of his favorite artist's work, including Edward Borein etchings, hand-colored letters, and monotypes, the largest collection of Hans Kleiber art in existence, Gollings oils and drawings, and the Gallatin Collection of Plains Indian Native American art. All together, they comprise one of the most significant collections of Western and Native American art in the Rocky Mountain West. Enjoy indoor and outdoor dining with 180-degree views of the Bighorn Mountains.

Fort Phil Kearny State Historic Site

Fort Phil Kearney was the largest of three forts built along the Bozeman Trail, a route which led to the gold fields in Montana. Originally entirely surrounded by an eight-foot fence, it was constructed to protect freighters, prospectors and travelers making their way west. The Wagon Box Fight of 1867 occurred when 32 woodcutters and guards were attacked outside the fort and defended themselves by firing new breech-loading rifles from a corral of wagon boxes until help arrived from the fort. When the Fort Laramie Treaty was finalized in 1868, all the forts were abandoned. Today, trails within the property lead visitors to the sites of the conflict, and interpretive signs explain the events from the perspectives of both the military and Native Americans.

Buffalo

Nestled in the foothills of the Big Horn Mountains, Buffalo is on the route between Mount Rushmore and Yellowstone National Park. It was originally protected by one of the forts built to protect settlers and prospectors moving west and Main Street still boasts more than a dozen historic buildings. Buffalo was also the birthplace of “the Western” in literature. In the 1880s, Owen Wister visited Buffalo’s historic Occidental Hotel and used it and its famous guests to create the setting and characters for his 1902 classic novel, The Virginian. The story of a frontier cowboy honorably battling thieves and outlaws and winning the heart of an attractive and young schoolteacher, set the precedent for good-guy heroes in future Westerns. It also included the world’s first literary shootout, thought to have occurred in real-life in front of the Occidental.

Historic Buffalo Walking Tour

Stroll along North Main Street to discover the Historic Mansion House Inn, which has been receiving guests since 1906, Buffalo’s first movie theater, two historic buildings that house the work of artists, the Occidental Hotel, and the historic courthouse. On South Main Street, see the Shaver Block and Gatchell’s Drug Store, which opened in 1904 (now a museum).

DAY THREE

Jim Gatchell Memorial Museum of the West

Before he opened a pharmacy in 1900, Jim Gatchell had grown up on a nearby Lakota Native American reservation. Fluent in Lakota and known for his caring nature, Native Americans who grew to trust him brought him guns, war bonnets, tools, medicine bags, bows, arrows and clothing. As word about the gifts got out, local residents began donating mementos of historic names, places and events from Johnson County. This is the collection of more than 15,000 items you'll discover in the museum in downtown Buffalo. In addition to the main museum on Fort Street, there is also a Carnegie Wing located at 90 North Main Street.

Cloud Peak Skyway

From Buffalo, you'll be taking the Cloud Peak Skyway, one of the original touring Parkways built in America in the 1920s.

Tensleep Canyon Interpretive Site

Sitting along side Cloud Peak Skyway, the Tensleep Canyon Interpretive Site illustrates the geography and geology of this very scenic area. Beginning about 75 million years ago, the land began to rise slowly above the seabed that covered the area, reaching an elevation of nearly 20,000 feet. Since then, glaciers carved out the valley of Tensleep Canyon within the last 250,000 years, leaving behind the U-shape of the valley bottom, and the piles of boulders, or glacial moraine. The “West Moraine” stretches for 10 miles, making it the longest moraine in the Bighorn Mountains.

Worland

First settled in 1900, Worland was moved from one side of the Big Horn River to the other to accommodate the railroad. The Washakie Museum provides insights into the history of the region.

Greybull

Greybull takes its name from a local Native American legend that claimed a very revered great albino buffalo once roamed the area, which they considered a sign from the Great Spirit. Native American arrowheads, fossils and semiprecious stones can be found around town. The Greybull Visitor Center has a host of information about the area and beyond, so don't hesitate to ask for information or recommendations.
